Month: January

Children learn best in the context of a loving relationship. These activities are designed for children and adults to do together. Children should be encouraged to do as much as they safely can by themselves. There should be a lot of lively discussion accompanying these activities.

Paper Plate Clock
Cut out the clock and mouse. Glue onto poster board or cardboard for durability. Punch a hole in the top and the bottom of the clock. Attach the mouse to a piece of string and run it through the holes knotting it in the back. Run the mouse up and down the clock as you say the rhyme.

Draw numbers on a paper plate positioning them as they would appear on a clock face. Cut a long and short arrow from construction paper and attach them to a center of the clock with a brad. Help children position the arrows to indicate different times.

Preschoolers can learn about 12 and 6, representing the half hours and older children can begin to learn about 5 after, fifteen, forty-five, and so on. Create a series of clocks indicating times for breakfast, school, naptime, dinner, and so on and hang them in the order of occurrence.

Discover a Mouse
Visit a pet store or even a local discount store with a pet department to see and touch a real mouse. Children learn best from real, live, hands-on experiences.

Directionality
Work on direction words such as up, down, between, under, above, below, inside, outside, behind, over, around, and so on. Use arms, use a stool to stand beside, a table to crawl under, stuffed animals to stand between, and so on. This is a fun way to learn new vocabulary.
